Born in 1970, she had her first psychotic experience of 14 years, which led her to leave school. After a year of mental illness, probably bought by abusive childhood, she Dolly decided that she should write about her experiences. She was inspired to write her own story after reading Jason Pegler's autobiography 'to Can of Madness'. Since then, she has written five books, she became a successful action poet who has traveled all of Europe and has established two Benã © physical organizations. The writing of book extract has always helped me. She found him when she had 22 years and has kept me alive since then. During my worst depressions, writing gave me a reason to wake up for the map. Would you still have continued writing if they were never published? Of course. One of my favorite writers, Charles Bukowski, said about writing: "It is last expectation, the last explanation, that is what writing is." A simple role will not judge you, it will criticize you. And above all it won't lie to you. If you can't say what you have to say face to face, write it. People with mental health problems who can think about writing her or at least tell her history. Their lives should not be what they believe are dirty secrets that they have to hide. A woman in one of my book signings shake her head sadly and said: "I can't, it's too painful. And also, nobody wants to hear it." That is what I thought once. Now that is false. People, men and women, young and old, rich and poor, have taken me aside after reading my book and saying, sometimes with hats in my eyes, "this also passed me to me . But please don't tell anyone who did it. "This is painfully heartbreaking. Because I think If you do not share it positively, it will manifest yourself elsewhere, in your body, in your relationship with others and the world. For for It can be seen in the eyes of some people; They try to smile, but their eyes don't believe it. His eyes are telling his history-something about his life will always. So he could have a little control over him. Pavelback! Condition: new. Language: English. New book. Robert Scotellaro has published brief fiction and poesí in numerous magazines and anthologies printed and in line. He is the author of five literary books. The most recent collections of him are Rhapsody of Fallen Objects (Flutter Press 2010) and The Night Sings A Cappella (Big Table Press 2011). He is the winner of three books for children. Born and raised in Manhattan, he currently lives in San Francisco with his wife and daughter. "Measuring the distance grabbed me with its first line" "you can keep the frogs, my ex says" and never let go. I was a totally arranged prisoner. These bright flash fictions puls with heart and humor, presenting a vision of life and love that is as cunning as realistic-and above all, supremely entertaining. If there is any justice, are you listening, gods of literature? - This jewel of a collection will obtain the broad reader that deserves so richly. "Time for This "I would find it so hard while reading this book that I almost drowned until I died in a submarine of blackened attempt. True story. Robert Scotellaro has never lost his look as a boy and his gaze from the world, so that it does not matter how sticky or noir-ish a situation that vents (and many will proud Charles Bukowski), somehow manages to rescue his characters hitting hit has his characters hitting his characters hitting his characters hitting his charac the distance is the work of a teacher narrator. Our favorite collection of 2012". -Boston literary counts "through a precise diccion and often hilarious narratives, Robert Scotellaro does in two pages to what other authors cannot do in hundreds. His writing is a deep trip through of awkwardly human situations. With impeccably described details, the destination gives way the most deep introspecccion "-Kona Morris, co-founder and editor, Fast Forward Press. TASCHENBUCH. Condition: Neu.
